Xenophobia on SA Social Media, 2011-
2017:
Categorisation of the Conversation

Categorising the Xenophobia Conversation

For this study, we have taken the entire public social media conversation pertaining to Xenophobia. Looking only at content originating from South Africa, we are able to segment the data into conversation themes and specific categories. We are then able to identify and analyse each of these themes as far back as 2011.

The following themes were identified:

PROVOKING

- Pro-Xenophobia/Violence - outright xenophobia or condoning/support of violence as the answer
- Anti-Immigrant - hateful anti-immigrant rhetoric
- Anti-Crime/Drug/Prostitution - violent, confrontational or accusatory rhetoric focused on crime

PACIFYING

- Anti-Xenophobic - speaking out against xenophobia
- Anti-Violence - speaking out against physical violence, intimidation, looting etc.
- Not All Foreigners - anti-xenophobia posts postulating that the transgressors are a small minority

NUANCED OPINION

- Problem Finding / Finger Pointing - posts concerned with either casting blame or solution finding
- Anti-Xeno/Violence, Anti-Crime/Drug/Prostitution, Pro Immigrant – linking crime to illegal immigrants, whilst condoning xenophobia and/or violence
- Anti - White / Colonial - xenophobic rhetoric focussed on or directed against the white population or colonialism

OTHER

- News / Reporting - original news stories or retweets of captions
- International Xenophobia - conversation about xenophobia in countries other than South Africa

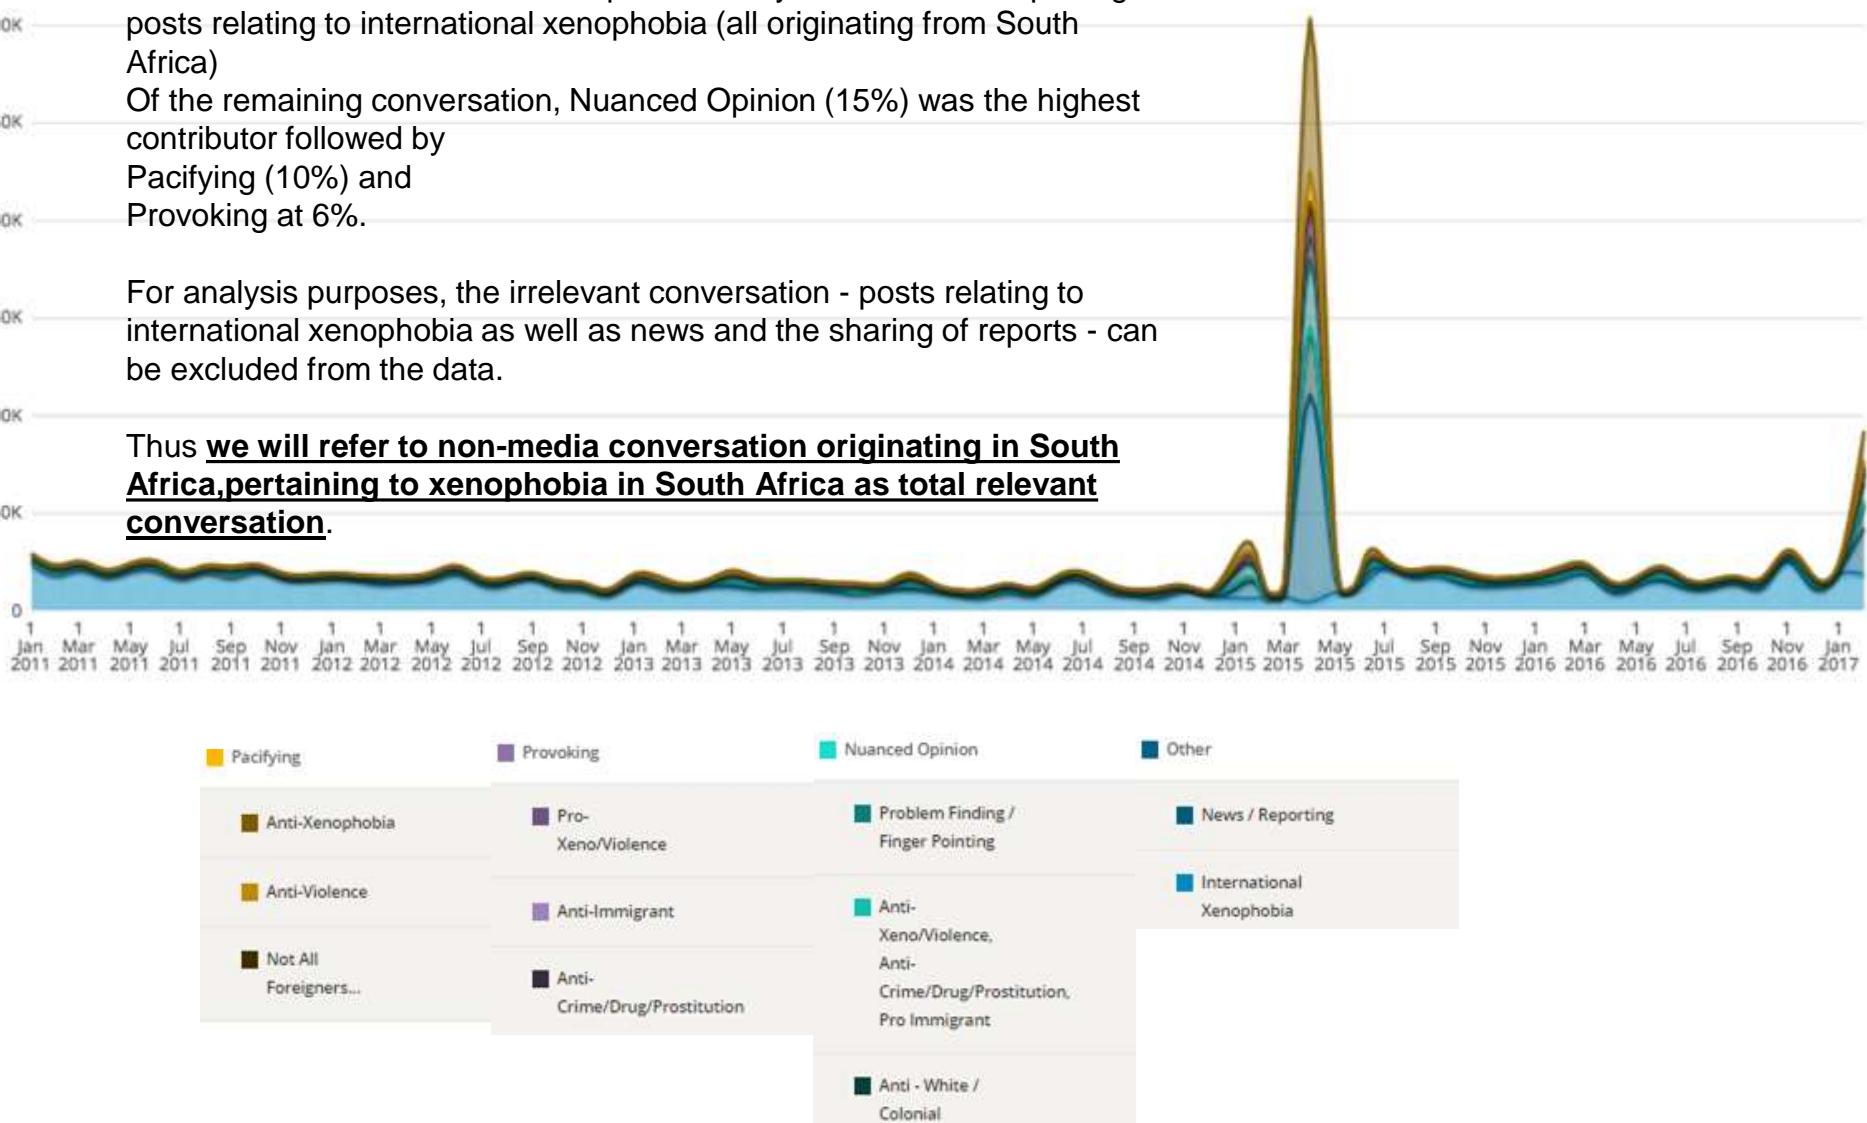

Looking back to 2011, we note that:

69% of the total conversation is represented by either news & reporting or posts relating to international xenophobia (all originating from South Africa)

Of the remaining conversation, Nuanced Opinion (15%) was the highest contributor followed by Pacifying (10%) and Provoking at 6%.

For analysis purposes, the irrelevant conversation - posts relating to international xenophobia as well as news and the sharing of reports - can be excluded from the data.

Thus we will refer to non-media conversation originating in South Africa, pertaining to xenophobia in South Africa as total relevant conversation.

Looking exclusively at the conversation aiming to pacify xenophobic tension, two points are important:

1. The “ambient volume” (i.e. amount of conversation outside of specific events) is low and doesn’t follow the same spikes and troughs that the other categories follow. As a result, it may be fair to say that xenophobic pacification predominantly takes place when the threat is high, but that little engagement otherwise occurs.
2. Pacification represented on Social Media was far lower in 2017 than in 2015 - despite higher social media usage numbers.

This is likely to be a function of the lower level nature of the 2017 ‘crisis’ as opposed to the more protracted and deadly violence of 2015.

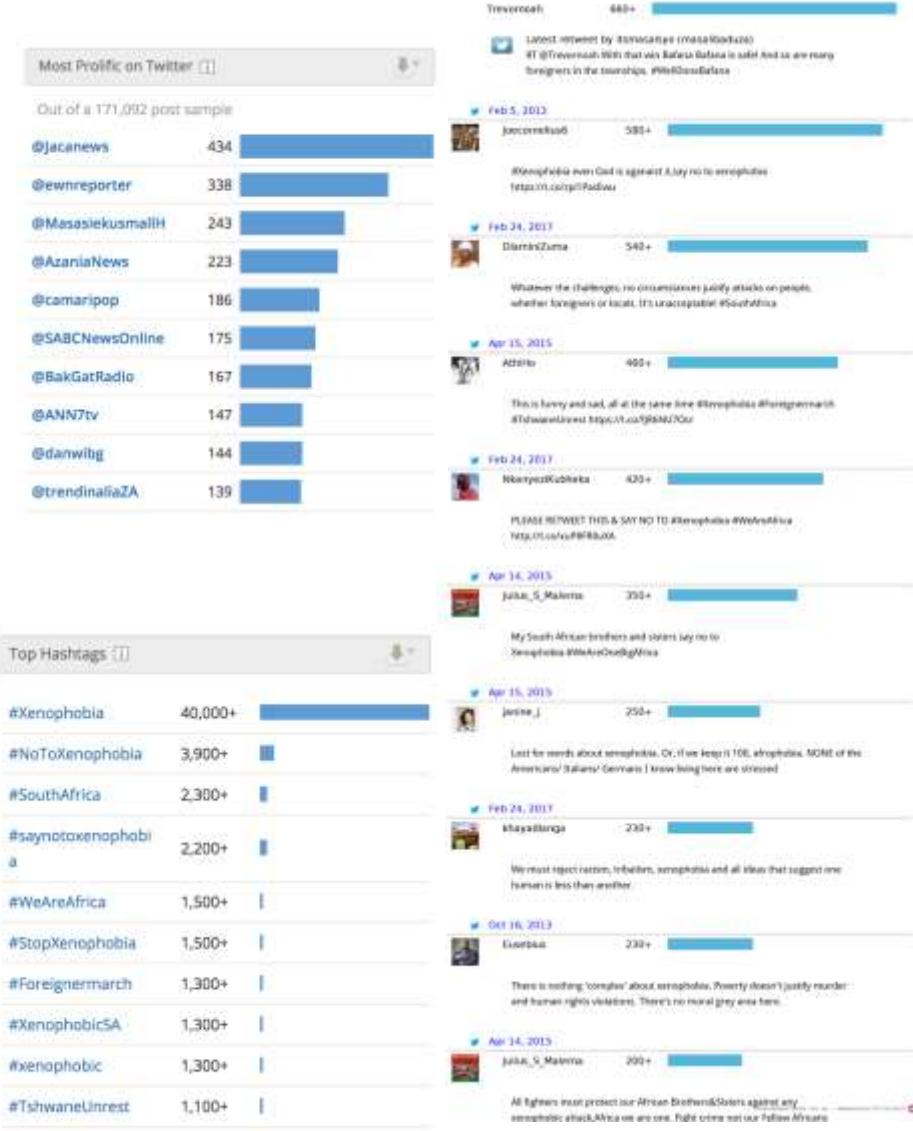

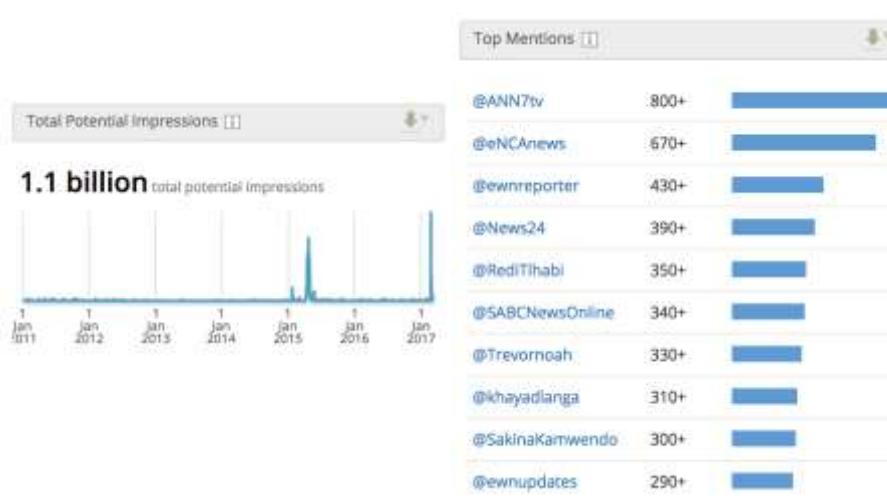

Xenophobia Pacification

Considering that the pacification conversation is largely activated by flash events, the conversation still reached a potential 1.1 billion individuals (largely focused in Southern Africa) meaning a strong counter-narrative is in place during crisis - but only during crisis.

Increasingly the trend, within the conversation, is that anti-foreigner sentiments are being replaced with “we are all African” (#WeAreAfrica, for example).

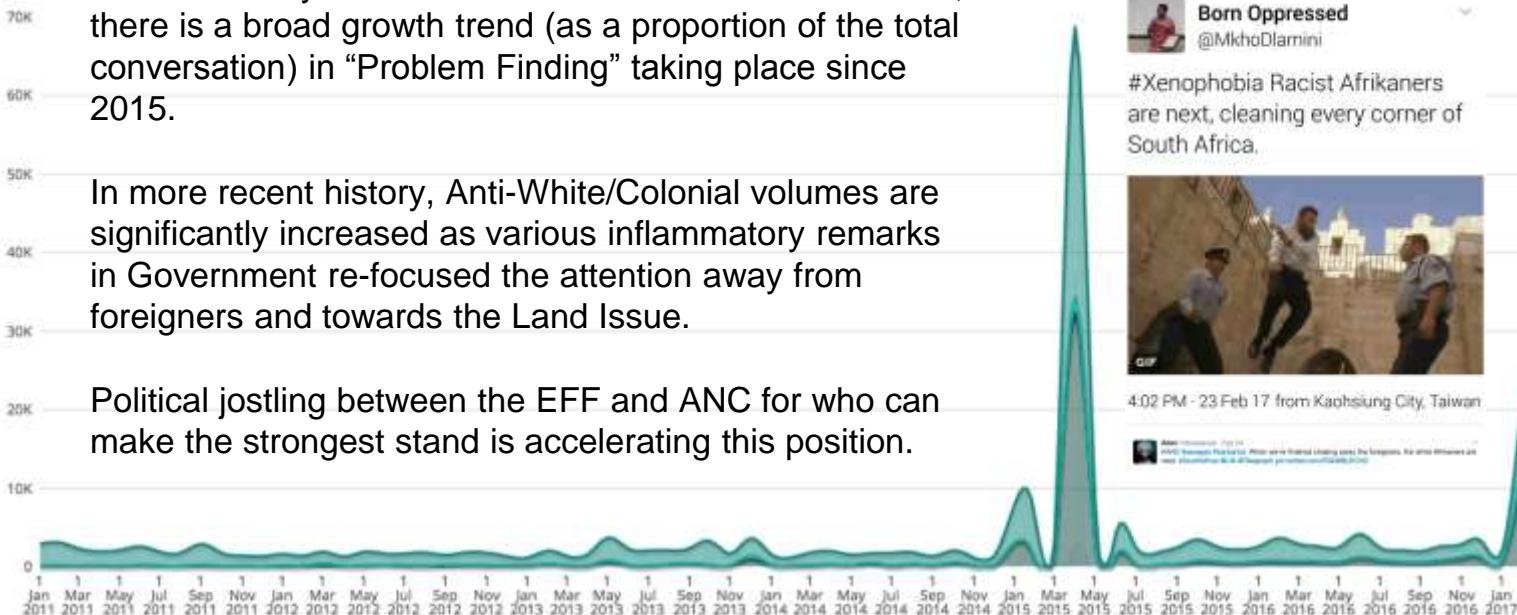

Advocacy wise, note that the most shared piece of content was from Trevor Noah in 2013.

Nuanced Opinion has a high ambient volume but also follows the key flash events of 2015 and 2017. That said, there is a broad growth trend (as a proportion of the total conversation) in “Problem Finding” taking place since 2015.

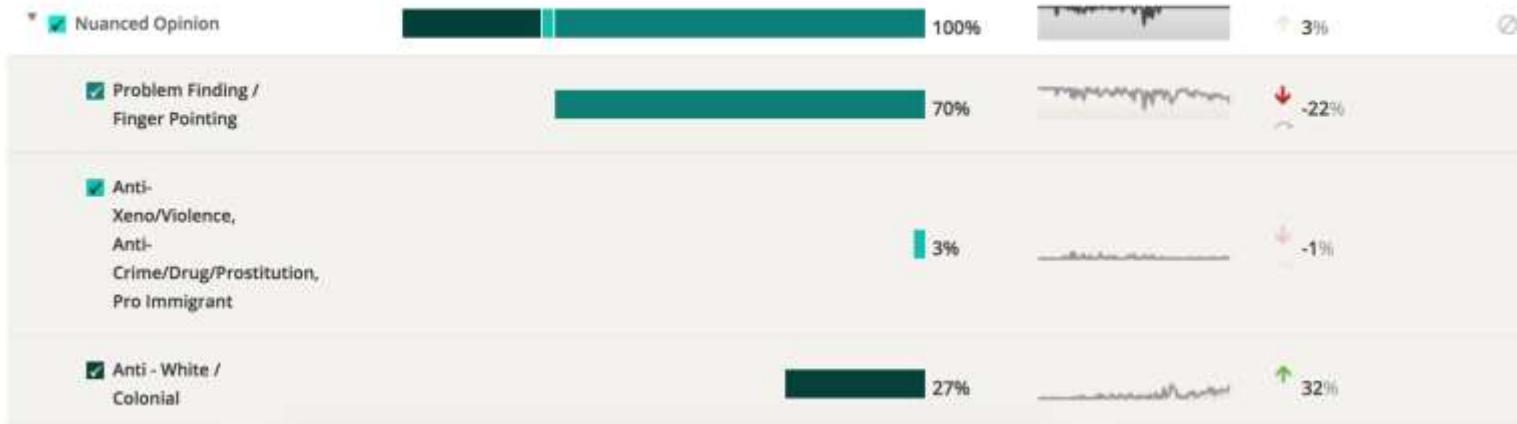

In more recent history, Anti-White/Colonial volumes are significantly increased as various inflammatory remarks in Government re-focused the attention away from foreigners and towards the Land Issue.

Political jostling between the EFF and ANC for who can make the strongest stand is accelerating this position.

4:02 PM - 23 Feb 17 from Kaohsiung City, Taiwan

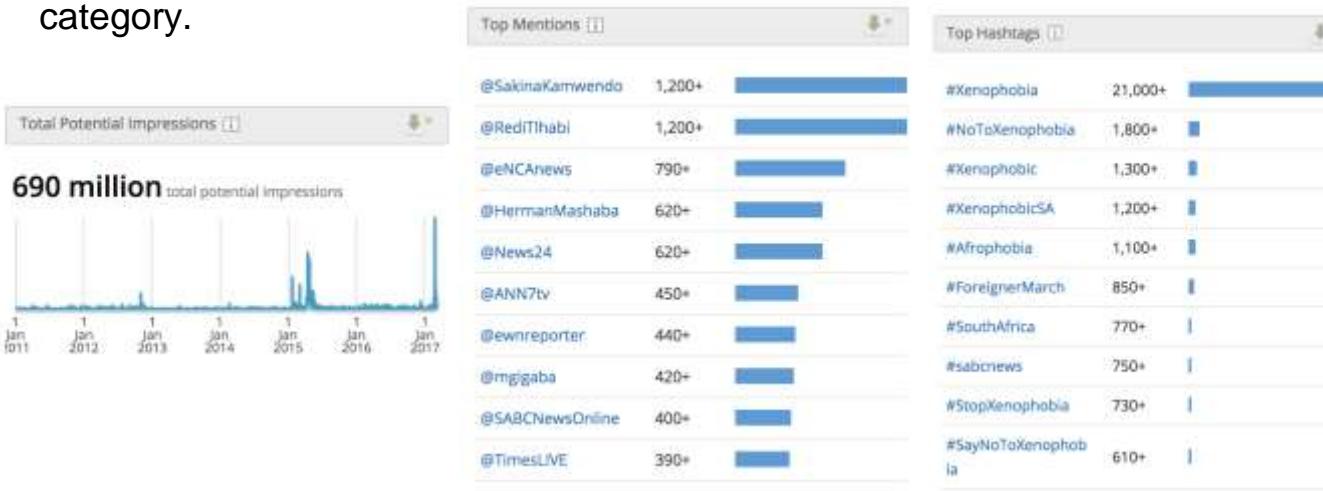

Adan Imanullah - 123 14
Anti Xenophobia Racist. Please we're United cleaning zones the foreigners. We still believe are here. #Xenophobia Racist #Afrikaners proimmigrant #SA #SA2017

Unlike some of the other categories, Nuanced Opinion is largely driven by low to medium influence individuals (vs media and high influence as we see in most other categories). This represents an opportunity to directly impact the discussion.

In particular, the lack of influencers means that engagement may result in behavioural change. The same is possible with anti-colonial where anger and frustration could be deflected back to government under-performance rather than historic divides.

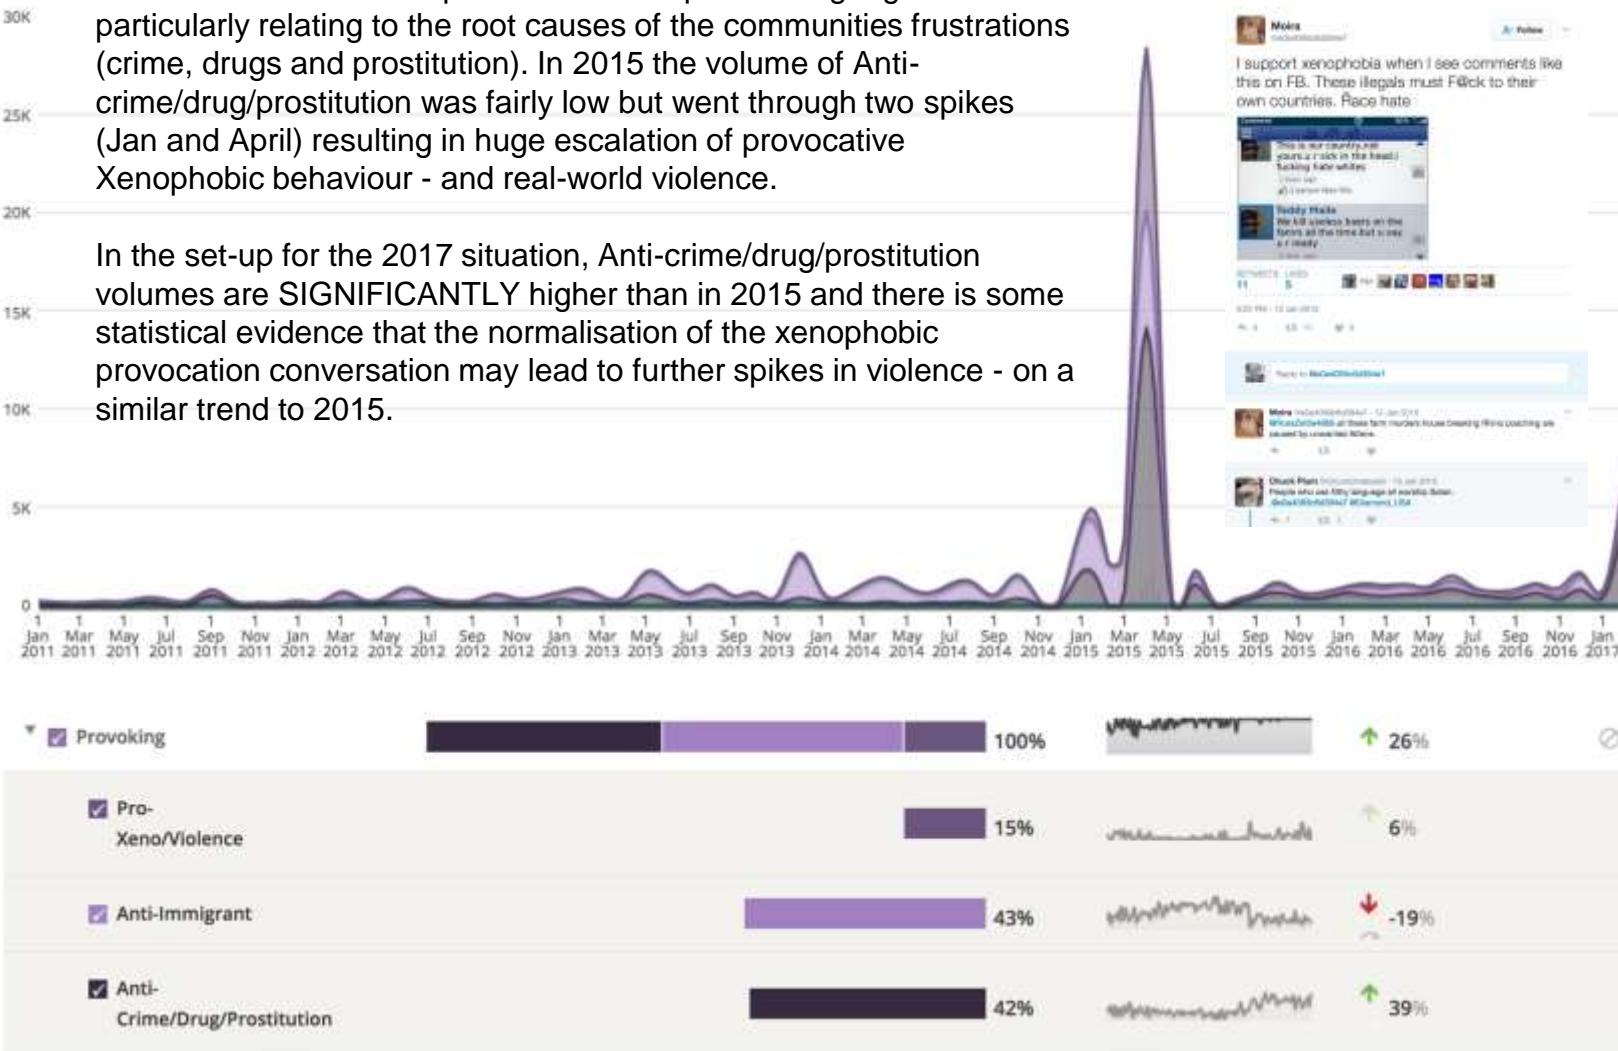

690 million individuals were potentially exposed to the conversation with Herman Mashaba being the most discussed politician within this category.

Xenophobia Provocation

Xenophobic Provocation presents a worrying and somewhat predictive trend. Leading up to major xenophobic event we tend to see an increase in overt provocative xenophobic language - particularly relating to the root causes of the communities frustrations (crime, drugs and prostitution). In 2015 the volume of Anti-crime/drug/prostitution was fairly low but went through two spikes (Jan and April) resulting in huge escalation of provocative Xenophobic behaviour - and real-world violence.

In the set-up for the 2017 situation, Anti-crime/drug/prostitution volumes are SIGNIFICANTLY higher than in 2015 and there is some statistical evidence that the normalisation of the xenophobic provocation conversation may lead to further spikes in violence - on a similar trend to 2015.

Total Xenophobia Conversation

	2011	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016
Anti-Xenophobia	2%	2%	4%	3%	17%	2%
Anti-Violence	<1%	<1%	<1%	<1%	3%	<1%

News / Reporting	2%	2%	6%	6%	24%	5%
International Xenophobia	83%	84%	68%	71%	26%	27%

- The vast majority of the conversation on xenophobia in South Africa comprises shared news stories and international xenophobia – ranging from refugee crises to Brexit to Trump.
- When we exclude all that data, we are still left with a sizable conversation – driven by individuals rather than media outlets and focusing on xenophobia in South Africa.
- Volumes range from 195 000 social media posts on the topic in 2014 to 542 000 in 2015. 2015 represented the highest volume by far – due to the comments made by Goodwill Zwelethini, subsequent violence in KZN and then the rest of the country. The average over the year was 1483 per day, but during the period in question averaged 5670.
- The whole of 2016 saw 234 000 posts on xenophobia at an average of 640 per day. In the first 2 months of 2017, we have already seen over 115 000 posts, at an average of 1958 per day.
- We run an Organized Interference Monitor – this looks for interference from individuals or organizations, and showed that on average there were no more than 3 contributions to the conversation made by any individual. We're able to conclude from this that there was not organized interference in the conversation – we stress that on a retrospective basis this tool looks at averages per author, so isn't a perfect instrument. In a live environment it's easier to look for spikes from individuals.
- It is in looking at the nature of the conversation that certain trends merge. We looked at 9 themes within the conversation, and how they change over time.

2015 - 1483.29

2016 - 639.61

2017 - 1958.78

The 2017 figure above is taken over a 59 day period from 01/01 - 27/02.

In comparison, over a 59 day period during the 2015 xenophobic flare up, the average number of posts per day was 5670.

Our Organised Interference Monitoring shows no organised interference – with no day averaging more than 2.8 contributions per individual.

That said, the highest contributions typically took place round flash events.

Main Findings: Pacifying Voices, 2011-2017

Pacifying: Anti-Xenophobia

- This is defined as posts directly speaking out against xenophobia

	2011	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	Jan & Feb 2017
Anti-Xenophobia	17%	15%	15%	12%	34%	10%	29%

- Anti-xenophobia ranged from a low of 10% in 2016 to a high of 34% in 2015. In January and February this year people speaking out against xenophobia comprised 29% of the conversation.
- The pattern we see here is that as a component of the total conversation anti-xenophobia remains low until a crisis emerges or an incident occurs, at which point it climbs substantially.
- Typically, politicians get involved once a crisis has evolved, and their voices are amplified in the anti-xenophobic conversation. Notable here was Julius Malema's tweet (below), along with Fikile Mbalula, Thabo Mbeki and Mmusi Maimane. Politicians voices are undoubtedly of great importance in the conversation, and should be heard as early, as clearly, as unanimously and as unambiguously as possible.

Main Findings: Pacifying Voices, 2011-2017

Pacifying: Anti -Violence

- This is defined as directly speaking out against violence within the context of xenophobia.

	2011	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	Jan & Feb 2017
Anti-Violence	<1%	<1%	<1%	<1%	6%	1%	6%

- Speaking out against violence forms a fairly low component of the conversation.
- In years in which there are no demonstrable xenophobic crises – at least that become widely known – it emerges as less than 1% of the conversation - in 2011, 2012, 2013, 2014 and 2016.
- In years in which high profile incidents occur, it rises to 6% - this in 2015 and Jan and Feb 2017.

Main Findings: Pacifying Voices, 2011-2017

Pacifying: 'Not all Foreigners':

- These are defined as anti xenophobia posts stressing that foreign/immigrant 'transgressors' are a small minority of immigrants/foreigners.

	2011	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	Jan & Feb 2017
Not All Foreigners...	11%	10%	8%	9%	2%	4%	3%

- A hardening of attitudes over time is evident here. This category comprised 11% of all conversation at its height in 2011, and has steadily dropped to 3% of all conversation on the topic in 2017.
- This narrative does decline in years of crisis though – 2015 and 2017 – which suggests that in these years it may be being replaced by more overt anti-xenophobic contributions.

Main Findings: Provoking Voices, 2011-2017

Provoking: Pro Xenophobia/Violence

- Defined as outright xenophobia or condoning/support of violence as the answer

	2011	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	Jan & Feb 2017
Pro-Xenophobia/ Violence	1%	1%	1%	1%	4%	4%	1%

- This is the most disturbing of all our categories, as these are social media posts that are a direct incitement to violence.
- This category It generally comprises only 1% of conversation, but rose to 4% in 2015 and 2016. In 2017 the pro-xenophobic conversation was focused on crime rather than violence against foreigners because they are foreign, explaining why the proportion of this conversation remained low at 1%.
- In absolute numbers, though, this represents large numbers of posts, and in evaluating the scale of the issue, looking at raw numbers is informative. In 2015 this category comprised 21 660 posts, in 2016 9 363 posts and in just 2 months in 2017 incitement to xenophobic violence comprised 1 156 posts.

Main Findings: Provoking Voices, 2011-2017

Provoking: Anti- Immigrant

- Defined as hateful anti-immigrant rhetoric

	2011	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	Jan & Feb 2017
Anti-Immigrant	3%	9%	16%	22%	5%	7%	4%

- Hateful Anti-Immigrant rhetoric built in 2013 (at 16% of conversation), and reached a peak in 2014 at 22% of the conversation.
- This tends to decline as a proportion of total conversation when crises occur – suggesting that it is of more concern in building up to events than during the events themselves.
- This emphasises the point that ant-immigrant rhetoric needs to be monitored and addressed on an ongoing basis – it is part of the buildup phase, and can be a pre cursor to violent incidents.

Main Findings: Provoking Voices, 2011-2017

Provoking: Anti- Crime/Drugs/Prostitution

- Defined as violent, confrontational or accusatory rhetoric focused on crime, and a purported link to foreigners/immigrants.

	2011	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	Jan & Feb 2017
Anti-Crime/Drug/Prostitution	4%	5%	5%	5%	8%	13%	10%

- This theme has grown over time, and also finds some expression in the 'finger pointing' category.
- Bear in mind that this category unashamedly uses crime as an excuse for aggression, violence and hatred towards all foreigners/immigrants - as such, its growth to comprising 13% of the 2016 conversation and 10% of the 2017 conversation is troubling.
- This has not been helped by politicians, who have clumsily attempted to link crime to foreigners/immigrants without clearly stating their position, and without providing any clear evidence of this. At best this position encourages closet xenophobes to make their positions more overt, and at worst incites violence.
- Also, even if crime stats were to show a preponderance of criminality amongst foreigners, we must remember that these stats can tend to be self-selective. The police may target foreigners because they are foreigners - not because they are criminals - and they thus provide easy pickings. Also, the argument that 'many foreigners are criminal' is a circular one if you consider undocumented foreigners to be criminal by definition.

Main Findings: Nuanced Opinion, 2011-2017

Nuanced Opinion: Problem Finding/ Finger Pointing

- Defined as posts concerned with either casting blame or solution finding

	2011	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	Jan & Feb 2017
Problem Finding / Finger Pointing	62%	53%	46%	45%	24%	45%	20%

- Problem finding and finger pointing is consistently one of the largest categories of conversation.
- It notably falls away during crisis years as more anti-xenophobic voices join the conversation. It has, though, been as high as 62% of the conversation in 2011.
- It is currently at its lowest point in 6 years and 2 months, comprising 'only' 20% of the conversation in 2017.
- This is largely due to the phenomenal recent growth of Anti-White/Anti-Colonial sentiment in the conversation.

Main Findings: Nuanced Opinion, 2011-2017

Nuanced Opinion: Anti-Xeno/Violence AND Anti-Crime/Drug/Prostitution

- Defined as linking crime to illegal immigrants, whilst rejecting xenophobia and/or violence

	2011	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	Jan & Feb 2017
Anti-Xenophobia/Violence AND Anti-Crime/Drugs/ Prostitution	<1%	3%	2%	2%	1%	2%	4%

- This theme has reached its height in the current 2017 conversation – albeit only at 4% of the conversation.
- This is conversation that accuses foreigners of being criminals while rejecting xenophobia and/or violence.

Main Findings: Nuanced Opinion, 2011-2017

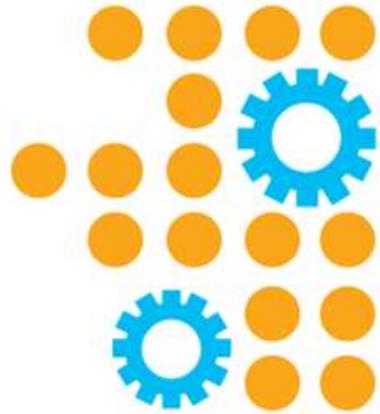

Nuanced Opinion: Anti-Xeno/Violence, Anti-Crime/Drug/Prostitution

Nuanced Opinion: Anti-White/ Anti-Colonial

- Defined as xenophobic conversation focused on or directed against white South Africans or colonialism.

	2011	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	Jan & Feb 2017
Anti - White / Colonial	1%	2%	6%	5%	16%	15%	24%

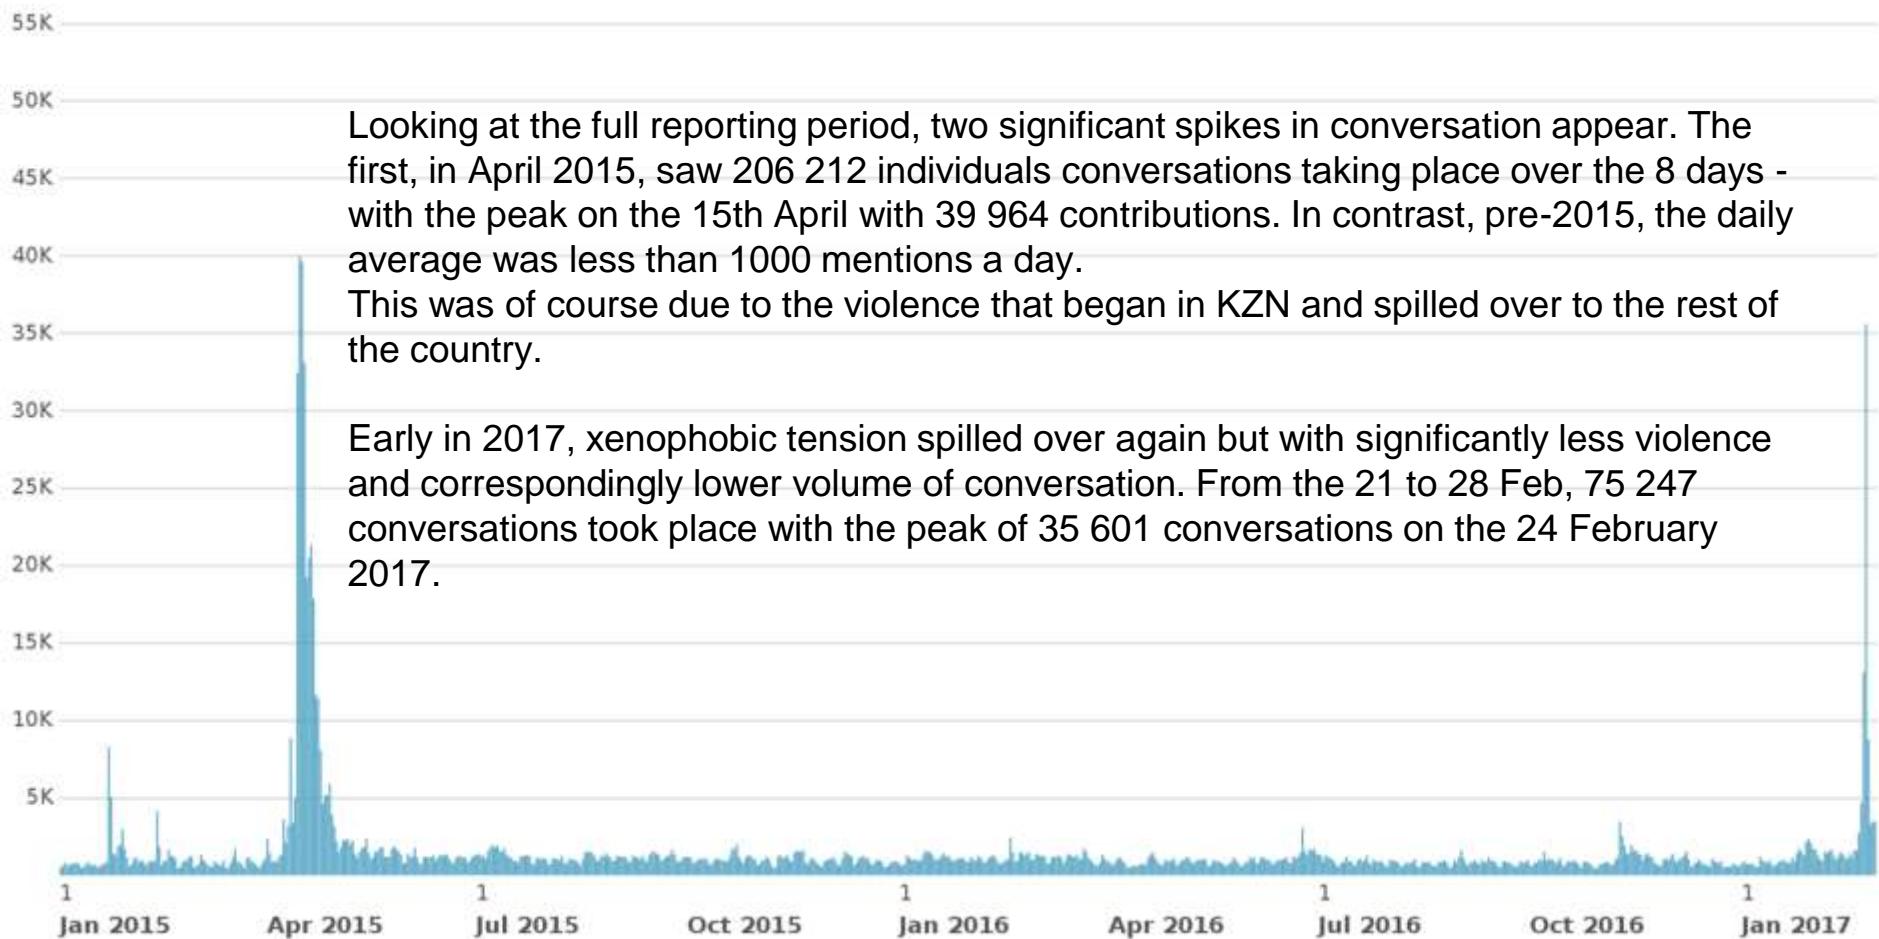

- The anti-white and/ or anti-colonial narrative has grown substantially in 2017.
- From a low of 1% in 2011, it now comprises fully 24% of the total conversation on xenophobia. This is a trend that we see in other hot button issues (like land and #feesmustfall).
- The growth of this political view has meant that its politics are attached to multiple issues – it is a ‘world view’ rather than a specific political stance.
- The growth of this viewpoint in the conversation represents a major shift in the political discourse in South Africa.

2015 saw two specific incidents reflected in the Social Media Record. The first, running throughout January and February, saw an upward swing of 18% in volume amounting to 70 702 related posts in the month.

In the second, between the 14th and 20th April 2015, 206 212 individual contributions to the conversation were found, spurred on by Zulu King's (Goodwill Zwelithini) comment that foreigners should "go back to their countries".

Throughout 2016, there were three major events reflected in the Social Media Record. The first of these was in February where the conversation spiked from the daily average of 970 posts to upward of 2400 posts. The large driver was media engagement on the topic - including Sitcom Generations attempting, poorly, to engage xenophobia through the show.

Then, by June, the “Tshwane Riots” take place where various foreign minority groups were targeted, looted and attacked. Interestingly, despite this going on, the largest spike in conversation was related to South Africans observing the xenophobia related to Brexit. Over the conversation throughout the year, 19% was twitter, 50% were blogs and 25% were comments.

The last event of 2016 garnered a total of 67,140 Relevant Posts. A large portion of this was in solidarity with the Anti-Trump (read: anti-xenophobic) movement. Over the course of the year 356 832 individuals posts were gathered.

February 2017

5 to 7 February

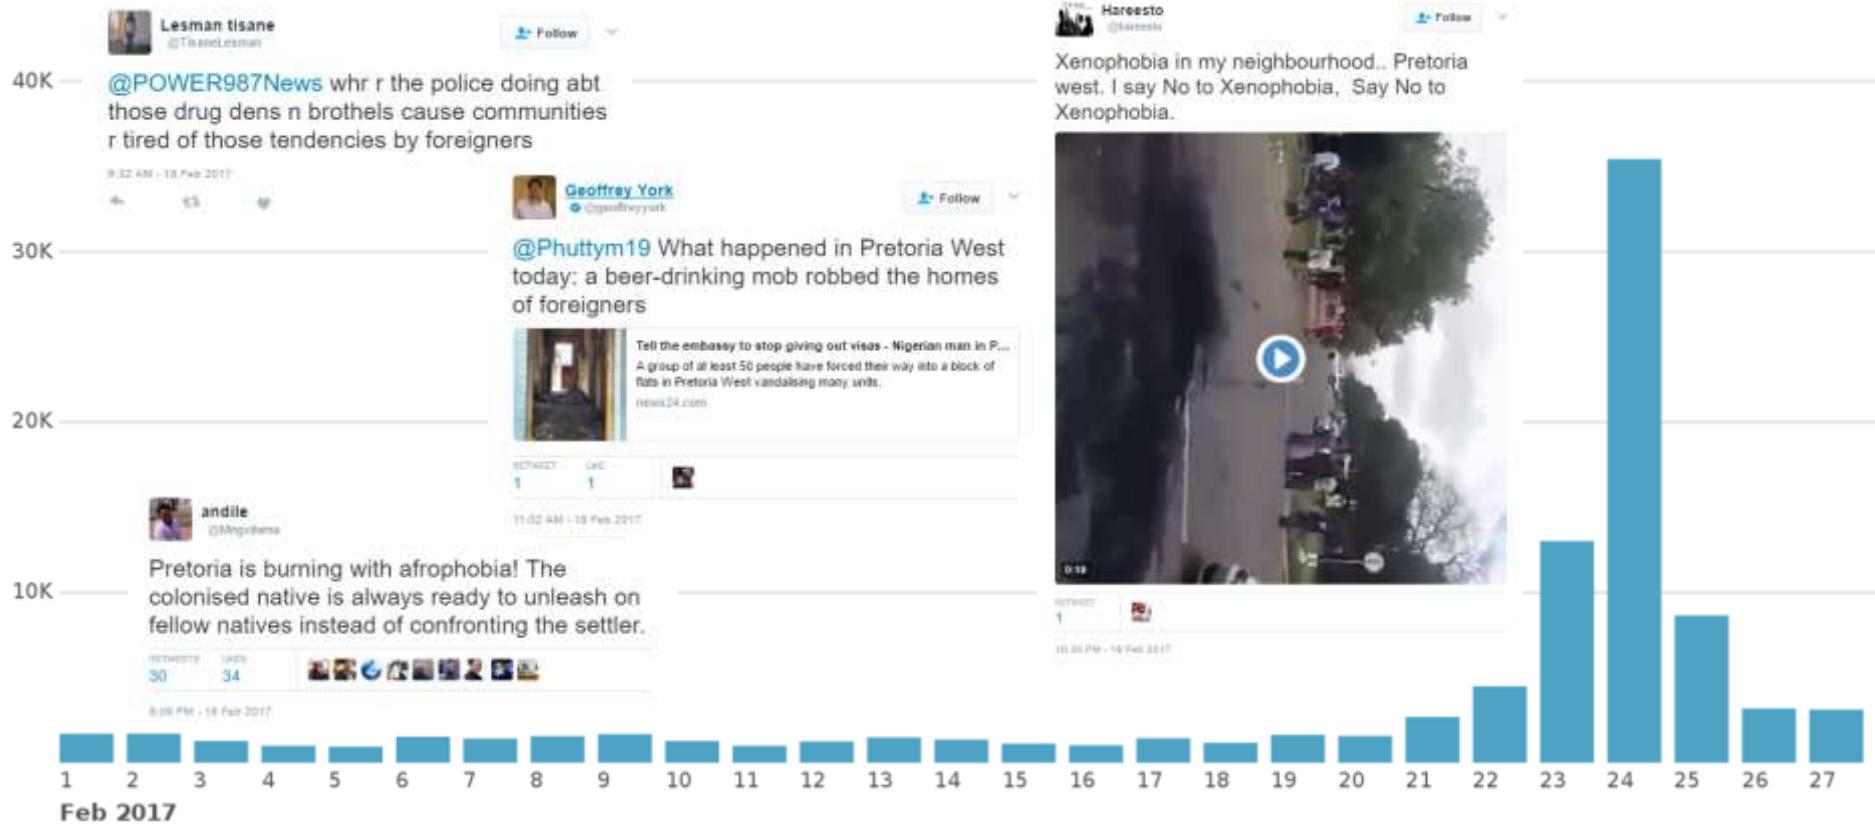

5 February - Rosettenville residents, along with Mamelodi Concerned Residents, marched to the Moffat View police station to submit a memorandum calling for action to be taken against Nigerians who they blamed for the proliferation of drugs and prostitution. Once back in Rosettenville, nearly five hundred people marched through the neighbourhood - escorted by the JMP - allegedly searching for drug dens, setting fire to three homes and one business.

7 February - Mamelodi residents protested by blocking a road that leads to RDP houses in the Hatherley area, which they accuse foreign nationals of illegally occupying.

11 February - Rosettenville residents claimed Nigerians were behind criminal activity in the area and that police were taking bribes, were complicit in the crimes and were among the young sex workers' clients. Angry residents went on to set fire to 12 houses while searching for Nigerians in the area. During the violence, a mechanic from Malawi was beaten by a crowd accusing him of being a Nigerian drug-dealer. Next door, an Ethiopian-owned tuckshop was completely looted.

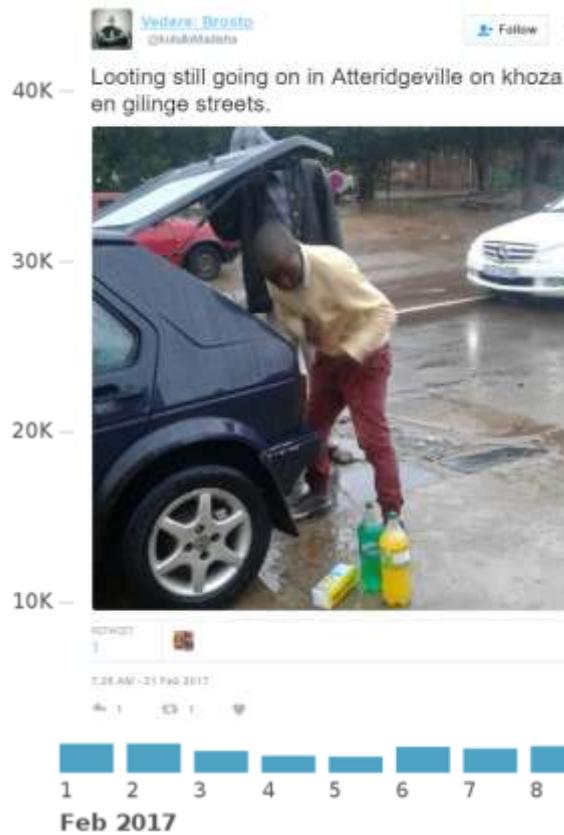

13 February - Malusi Gigaba and Sizakele Nkosi-Malobane visit Yeoville, Mayfair and Rosettenville to meet foreign nationals, inspect damaged buildings and hold a community meeting in Rosettenville.

17 February - Gauteng police spokesperson Kay Makhubela reports that 18 Nigerians had been arrested since the 13th for crimes related to drug dealing and prostitution.

18 February - Residents of Pretoria West raided homes they alleged were being used as brothels and drug dens. At least two houses were set alight and several vehicles and homes were looted. In the afternoon, police fired rubber bullets at a group of about 300 South Africans.

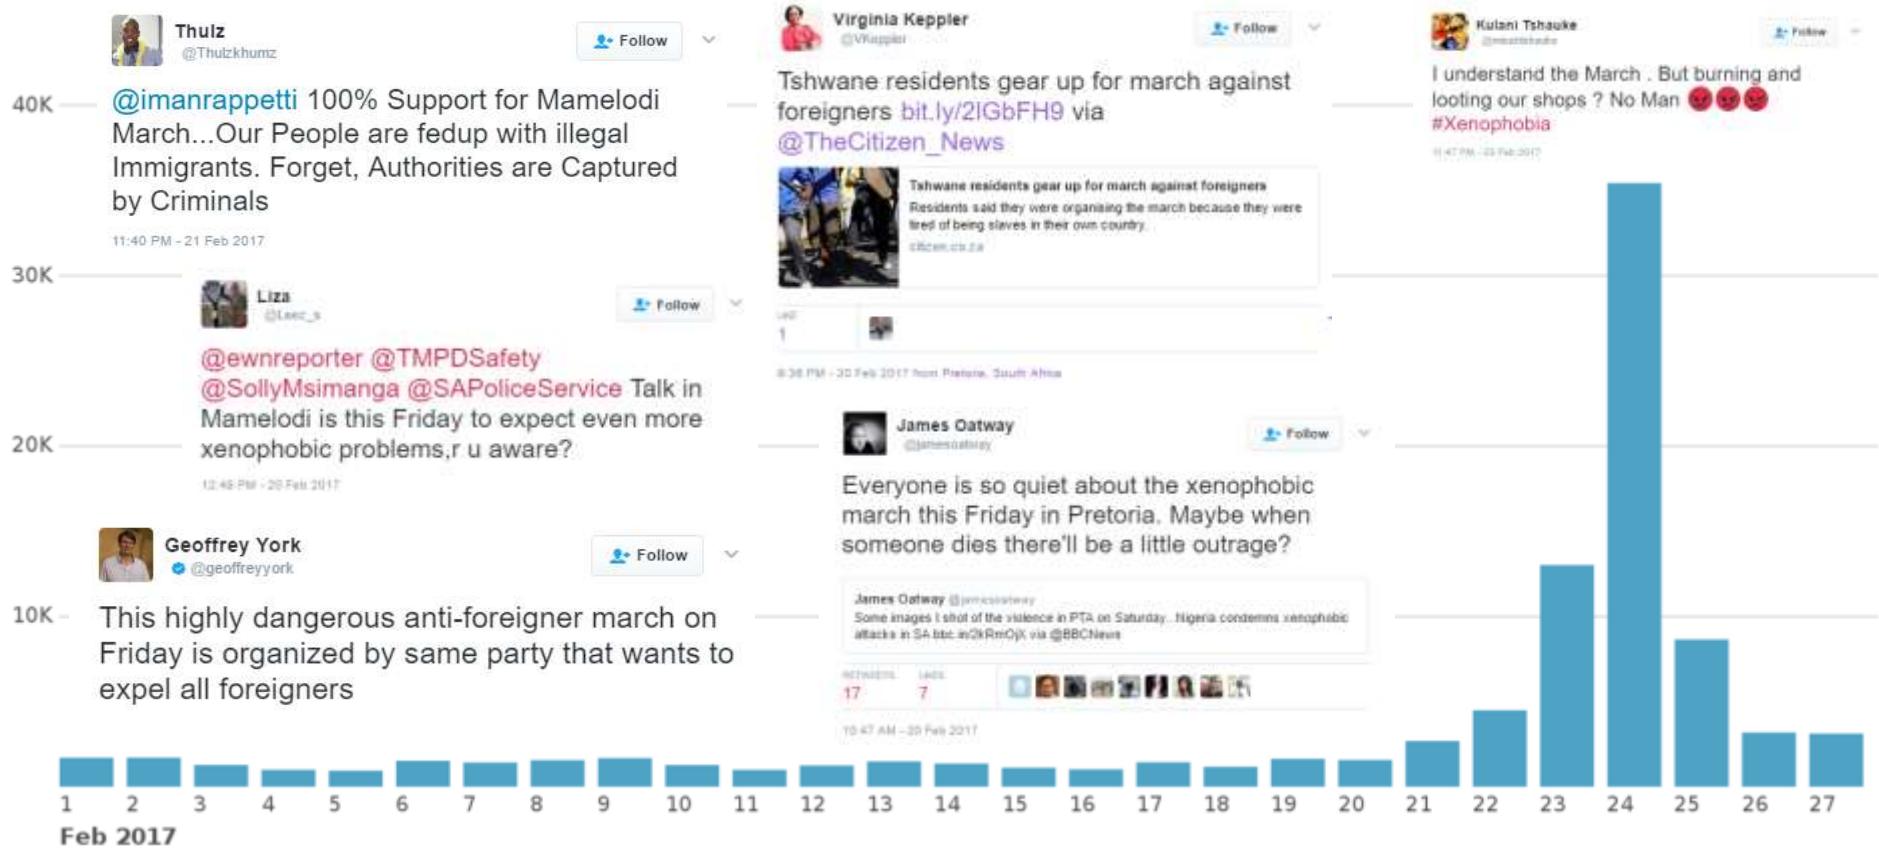

19 February - the Reclaim Our Community movement states that many of the drug dens are being run by foreign nationals in Rosettenville.

20 February - Atteridgeville Attacks escalated to Mamelodi East. It is not known how many homes and/or shops were looted or whether residents were assaulted during this incident. Foreigners who own spaza shops in Mamelodi locked up their businesses on 21 February.

20 February - 30 shops were looted in Atteridgeville, Lotus Gardens and Mamelodi East. Occupants were assaulted by locals claiming the properties are being used as drug dens and brothels. The following day, authorities announced no arrests had been made

21 to 23 February

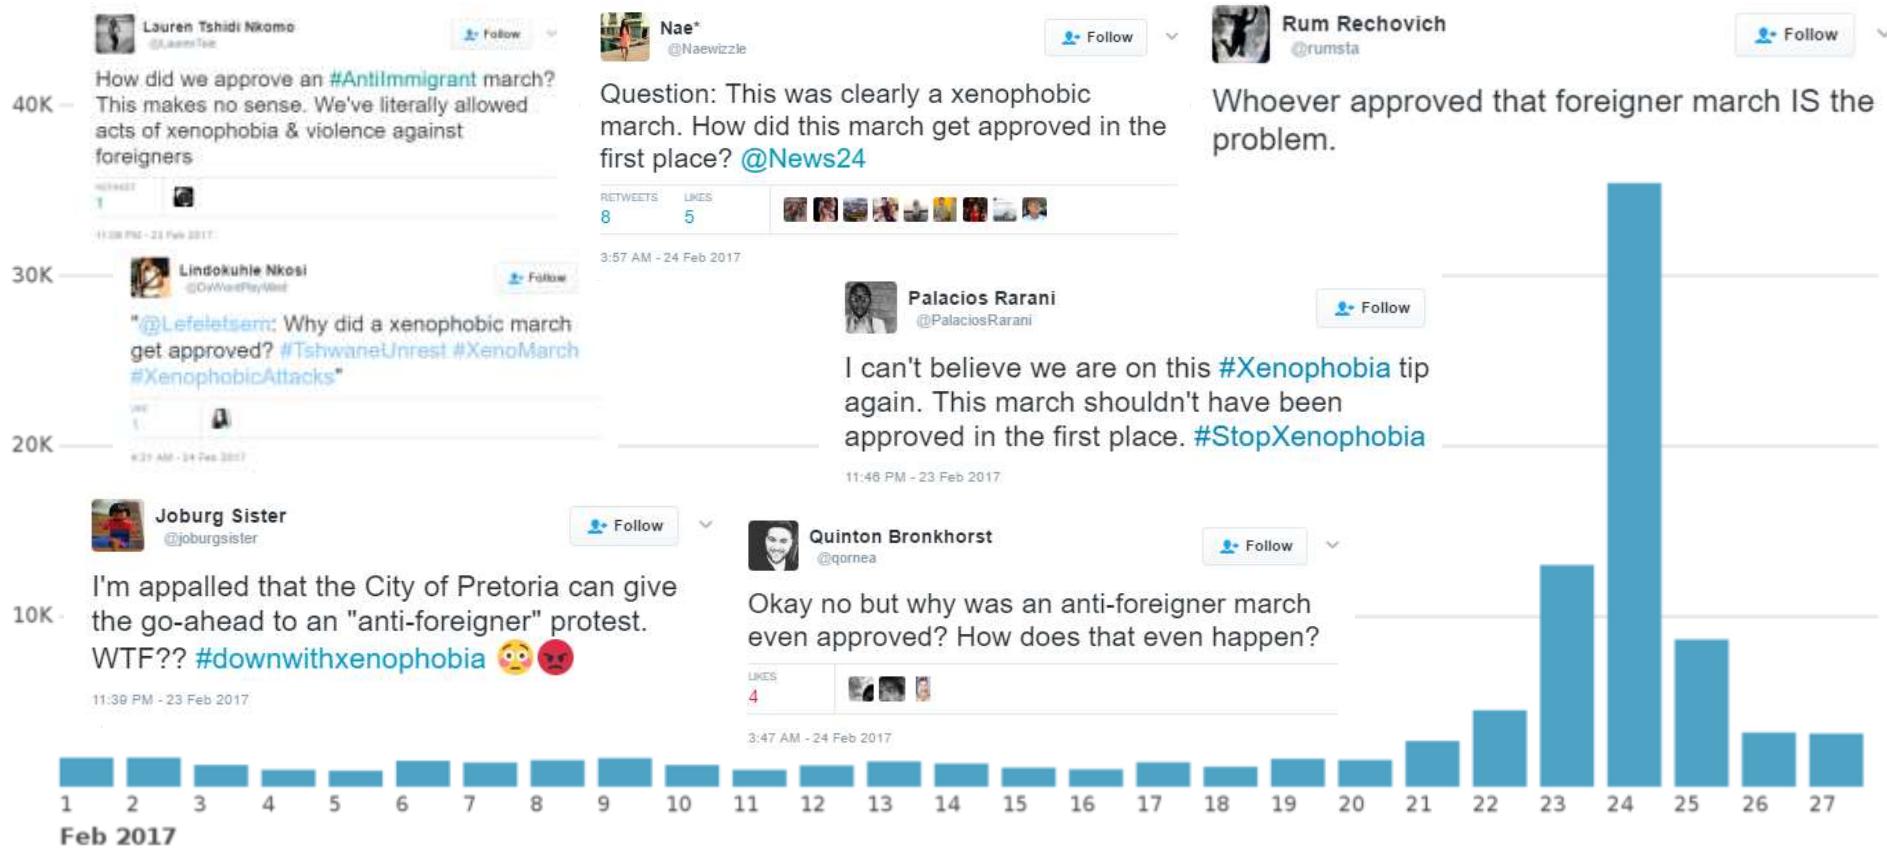

23 February - police announced they had arrested 42 people following the xenophobic attacks in Rosettenville. None of the arrests announced, however, were for violence or damage caused during the attacks. 14 people were arrested for possession of or dealing in drugs and 27 foreigners were arrested for lack of proper documentation

24 February

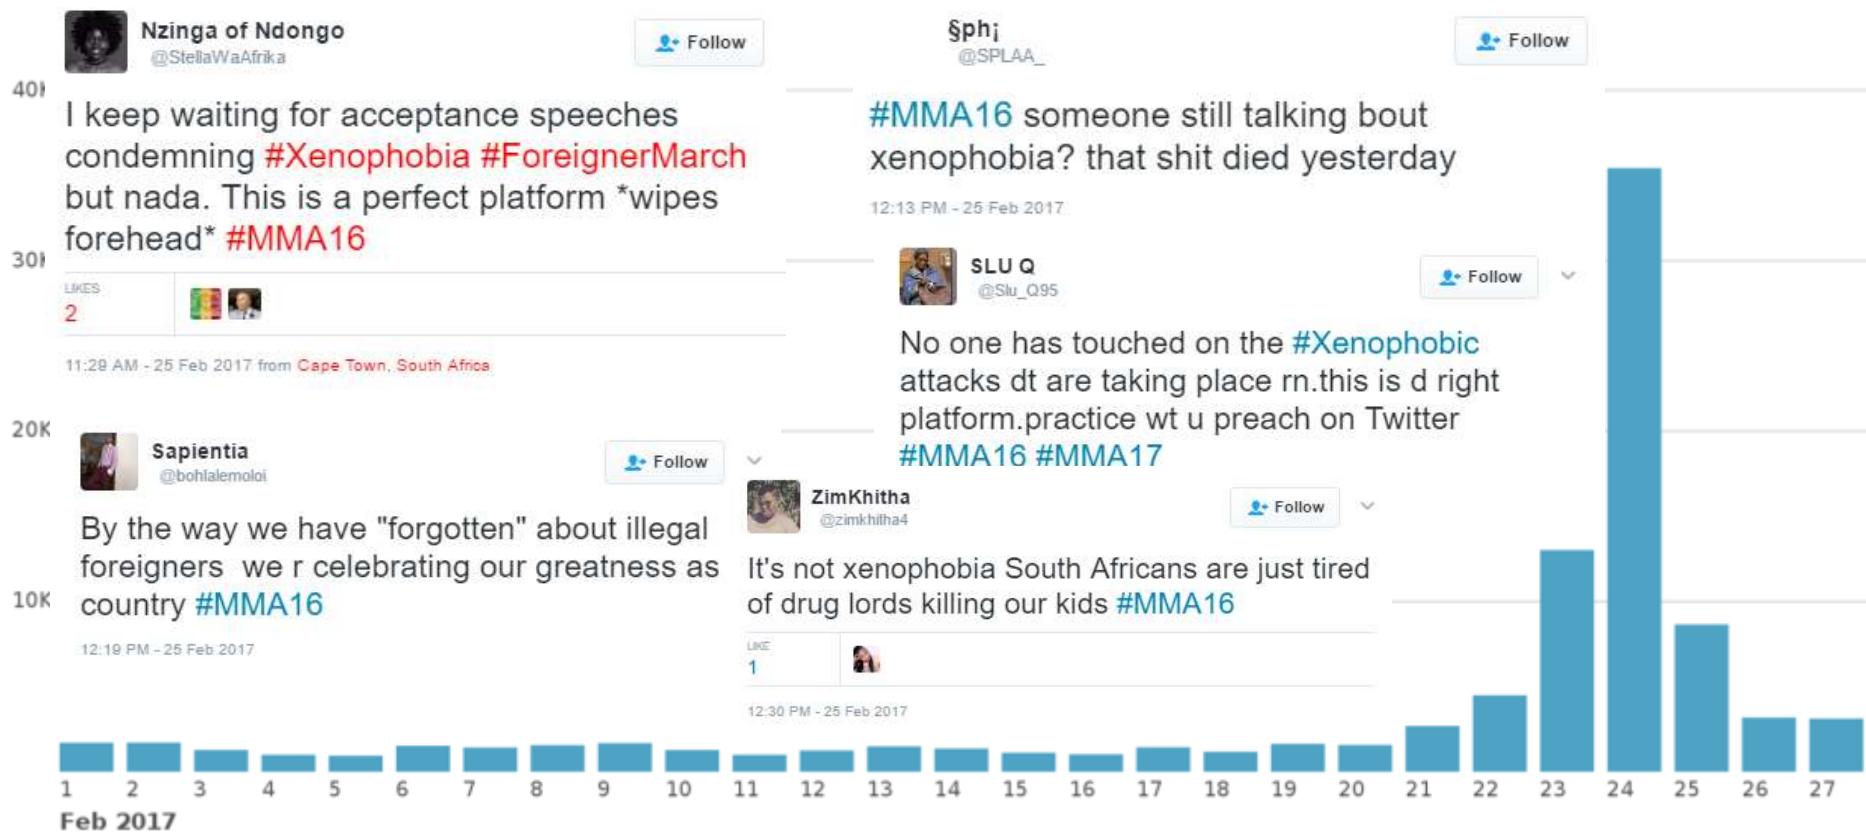

24 February - Atteridgeville residents blocked entrances to Atteridgeville with burning tyres. Protesters threw rocks, looted shops run by foreign nationals and were seen trying to enter flats where foreigners reside.

24 February - While events on the ground unfolded, South Africans were left in dismay as to what was “clearly a xenophobic march” acquired approval to demonstrate.

24 February - Residents raised concerns of poor police visibility in the area and described tense scenes on the ground, with protestors being ferried into the township by taxis and seen trying to enter a block of flats where foreigners reside

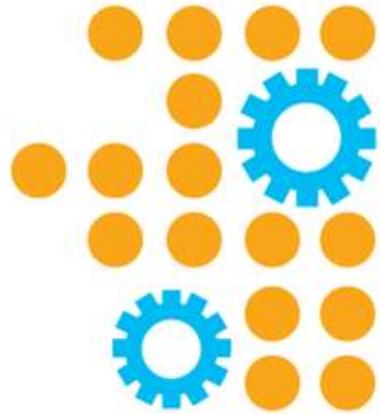

25 February - The Metro FM Music Awards (celebrating local artists) dominated social media and was woven into much of the xenophobia conversation. Opinions were varied on whether enough or too much was said regarding xenophobia. Themes from previous days - not xenophobic, just anti-drugs and prostitution - were still well represented, by volume, in the conversation.

26 to 27 February

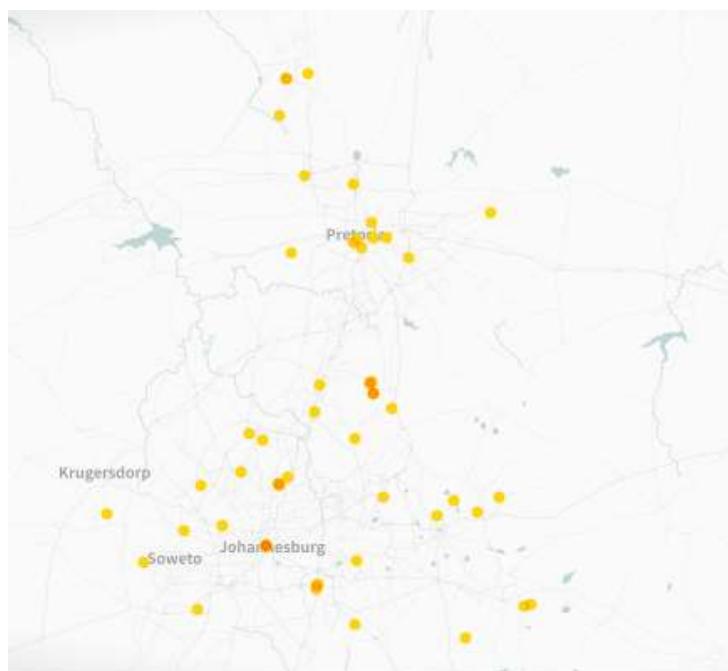

26 to 27 February - In the days following the march (allowing for a weekend) various politicians come forward stating their various positions (unanimously anti-xenophobic) for the record. The message from Mmusi Maimane (DA leader) received the most engagement followed by ANC minister Mbalula Fikile.

Geo Location, Topics, Daily Analysis

Snapshots: Geo Location

Geolocation is possible at different depths - country level, cities and urban areas, or GPS location. To ensure high levels of accuracy, posts with unidentifiable locations are excluded at each step.

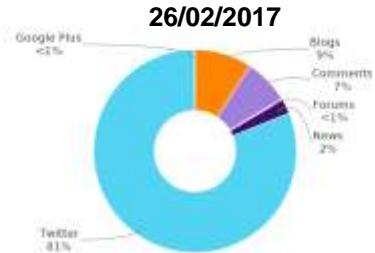

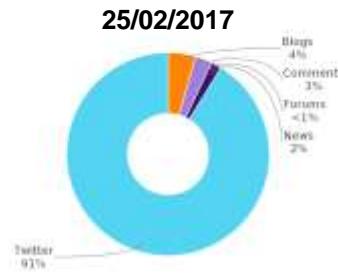

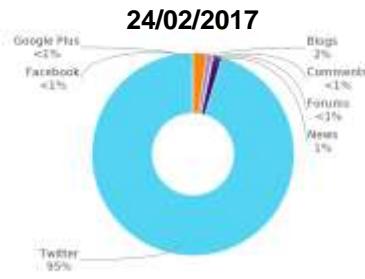

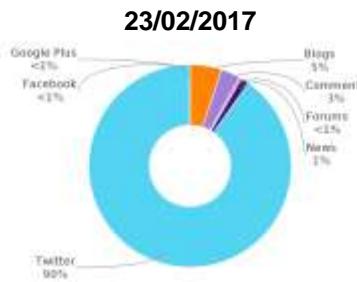

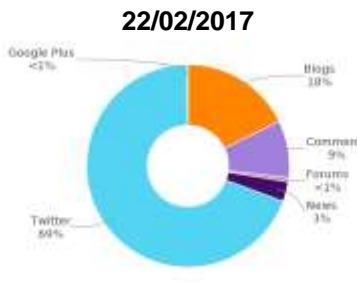

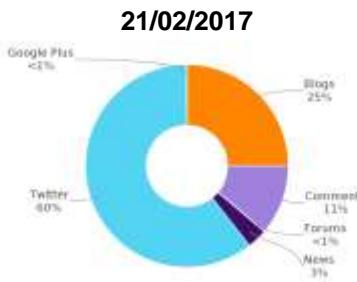

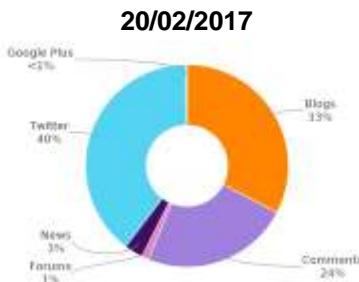

At the most fine grained level, we have been able to identify the exact GPS location of the authors of over 200 posts in February, at the time they were sent.

In comparison, we were able to identify the location of almost 25% of all posts down to city or urban area.

Snapshots: Content Sources - 20 to 27 February

Over the build up of the conversation it's interesting to note that the overall conversation taking place in forums, comments and news all started and ended fairly high - an indication of ongoing discussion on the topic.

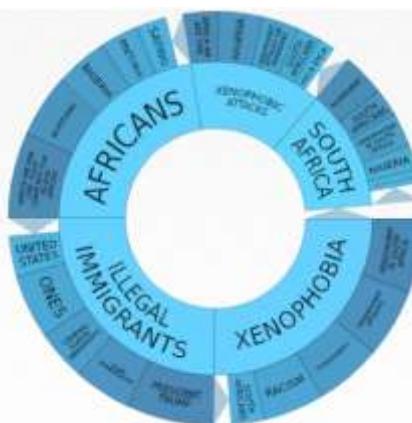

That said, during the high volume days, Twitter dwarfed all other sources occupying 95% of the online discussion on the 24th - as individuals mobilised for and against.

From the 20th, an interesting trend can be observed: initially the conversation was fairly balanced between 'foreigners' and 'illegal immigrants' but as the discussion progressed the conversation first focused on 'illegal immigrants' (21st) then moved to the dominant descriptor being 'foreigners' by the 22nd and 23rd. No longer was it about the illegal activity of the foreigners, but rather foreigners sans any distinction. On march day itself the conversation was a mix of those supporting the march, individuals witnessing violence, those standing against Xenophobia and those discussing the march itself (but not personally involved). Post march the 'foreigner' rhetoric resumed.

With an increase in conversation, day-to-day, of 71%, the 21st February saw 2678 xenophobia related conversations.

The top hashtags related to looting that took place in Tshwane.

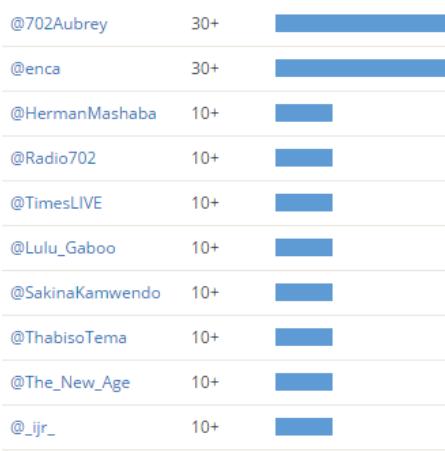

Notably, the conversation (unlike the 20th Feb) starts quickly in the morning but drops off quickly as no further attacks are noted.

The percentage of conversation from Gauteng (70.14%) was largely unchanged from the day before

On march day itself, the volume of conversation was 35 438 with a further increase in the volume of Gauteng driven conversation (now 72.09%).

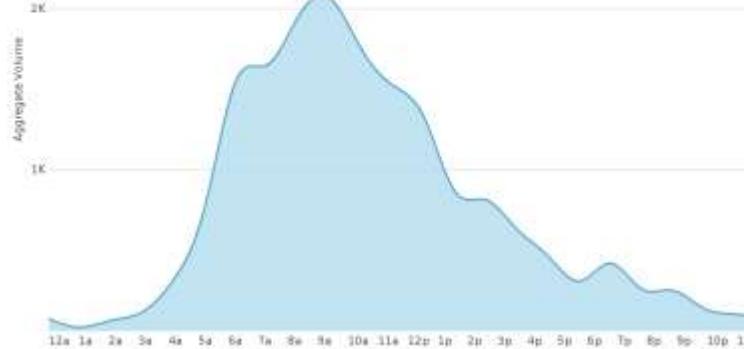

The largest hashtag on the day was #xenophobia (largely against) with #Foreignermarch and #TswaneUnrest following.

Early in February, Herman Mashaba (DA Mayor of Johannesburg) put out a statement noting that illegal immigrants were criminals - a statement he immediately retracted. As a result of this, he is treated as an instigator (if not the instigator) of the xenophobic violence - a point that is reflected in the Top Mentions for the day.

On Friday night volume drops off and by Saturday morning the volume of conversation is significantly reduced (in this case to 8 643). Interestingly, the volume of conversation coming out of Gauteng is significantly down (almost 9% to 63.46%).

When looking at what times the volume of conversation on this Saturday took place, it's interesting to note spikes as individuals are waking up and re-engaging with follow up stories in the media and in the evening - again, as news digestion takes place.

Divergent Conversation Themes

Within the broader conversation a number of key themes came forward. In particular, the following four required special mention. The slides that follow provide specific examples of each class of conversation. The topics are:

Drugs and Prostitution: Foreign nationals are being blamed for bringing drugs and prostitution to the communities that they've moved into.

Police: Mentions of communities needing to take matters into their own hands as a result of poor quality policing and corruption.

Political: Observers noted that the timing was convenient for the ANC and that it was likely serving some political interest. Others blamed the DA or the newly established South Africa First party.

Anti-white / Anti-colonial: Pro-African sentiment often spilled over into anti-white or anti-colonial rhetoric.

Drugs and Prostitution: Sample Data

About the Citizen Research Centre...

The Citizen Research Centre (www.citizenresearchcentre.org) is dedicated to investigating our societies and providing accurate, meaningful data that can be used to effect change – through knowledge, understanding of ourselves and ‘the other’ and through policy. We are committed to providing research on Citizens, and also research for Citizens – that reflect their own views back to them through social media analytics.

We run analytic research on social media globally through our partnership with Crimson Hexagon (www.crimsonhexagon.com)- arguably the best social media analysis platform in the world. We run retrospective longitudinal analysis (last five years) in over 200 countries. We mine and report on the entire world’s social media data – and our base currently holds over 1 trillion pieces of social media data.

Primary services: qualitative and quantitative research in 54 developing markets; deep social media analytics through our partnership with Crimson Hexagon

Vision: Our vision is to effect behavioural change through ground-breaking use of social media.
